face, body, or hair that needs some care given to it, you will find something to suit your needs. Their list of treatments is sixteen pages long, so it goes without saying that there is something for everyone! We were there for a 'skin instant' session which is one of the more specialised services they offer.

Think of it as being a bit like going to the doctor to get yourself diagnosed. The technician sits down with you, and using their high-tech electronic equipment and computer programs, they analyse the condition of your skin. Rather than relying on the traditional - but cumbersome - categories like 'dry' or 'oily', you get a personalised picture of what condition your skin is in at that exact moment. What's more, your skin might be in different conditions in different parts of your face, meaning that different parts require different types of attention. The skin instant process can tell you all of this, so that you are better equipped to take the best possible course of action for your specific need.
