ANTIOXIDANT-SPIKED SPRAY

Biologique Recherche's refreshing L'Eauxygénante mist contains an oxygen delivery system that stems from research on artificial blood, plus antioxidant-rich edelweiss extract and vitamin C sourced from kiwi and oranges. $37; biologiquerecherche.com

oxygen-based skin care

Acne and wrinkles are two of the most common beauty concerns targeted by oxygen-containing products. "Oxygen is anti-inflammatory, and kills acne-causing bacteria. It can benefit those with breakouts," says Somerville. Other products treat acne by killing the bacteria with hydrogen peroxide (which contains two atoms of hydrogen along with two atoms of oxygen), but Yates has concerns about its long-term use. "It's effective initially to clean a wound or clear the skin of debris, but when used for an extended period of time, hydrogen peroxide may actually slow the healing process," she explains. Oxygen is used in anti-aging products as well, since it plays a role in collagen synthesis, and lack of oxygen can make the skin thinner and wrinklier, thus accelerating the aging process.
