

HEALTH & BEAUTY

Health & Beauty » Winter Weather Solutions From Biologique Recherche

The temperatures may be hovering in the fifties this week in New York, but rest assured, a frigid dip is right around the corner. And that means big changes for your wardrobe—and your skincare routine. Just in time, old-school French brand Biologique Recherche has two botanically charged products to add to your beauty regimen. Its new Crème Dermo-RL and Serum T.E.W.L. (Trans Epidermal Water Loss) are designed to replenish lipid deficiencies that can be brought on by cold, dry air, thus protecting the skin's moisture balance. The Crème Dermo-RL is a rich, reparative emulsion that helps even the driest types rehydrate while boosting the external skin barrier with a mix of blackcurrant butter, grapeseed oil, hyaluronic acid, walnut extract, and glycoprotein. For those who need less moisturizing support, the Serum provides a lighter, protective layer that helps prevent water evaporation with cranberry, raspberry seed, and jojoba and sesame oils, as well as sea buckthorn berry. They can be used separately or together, depending on just how parched your skin is.